THE ROMANCE OF SCIENCE.

Interesting Discoveries While Exploring Ruins in Mexico.

The April number of the Monthly Bulletin, issued by the Central meteorological observatory of Mexico, contains an account of the discoveries made by Mr. Wm. Nevill in that republic. Following is a translation of the article.

"We referred recently to the results of the excavations made in Honduras by the employees of Harvard University. These discoveries may be paralleled by those made by an American mineralogist, Mr. William Nevill, in the state of Guerrero, southwest from Mexico. He was told by Indians of the existence of ruins near the city of Chilpancingo. In Texcal he discovered some fragments of jade-beads. Fifteen kilometers from this place, at Guaymasho (?) he was shown a temple of large dimensions. Here he made excavations, and the Indians discovered a plate of white earth upon which, mixed with bones, were a number of objects of nautilus or mother-of-pearl, most of them in the form of human heads, or of faces most delicately carved. In the same neighborhood were found the remains of a considerable edifice, more than 100 meters long, retaining at the corners vestiges of round towers and in the center a sort of small square cell or room. In the ground were buried pieces of plaster, which undoubtedly had formerly covered the walls; ornaments of white earth and fragments of carved jade. In the process of excavation the Indians took out also pieces of vases and the remains of another monument situated in the same neighborhood, and which seemed also to have been flanked by towers. One league from this place they discovered a large edifice constructed of stone, and surrounded by many objects of the same material. In short, in the space of some square leagues, Mr. Nevill found the ruins of twenty-two edifices, temples and pyramids, and in his excavations, however superficial they may have been, many articles in addition to those particularly above, including idols of jade, both large and small, all art stonically carved, and also two large stone statues of divinities. Enough has, however, been recovered to show the advantage to be derived from further exploration of these ruins, and the light which might thus be shed upon the history and civilization of the people who built these monuments.

"These explorations are for solution an interesting problem, as Mr. Nevill believes that the jade of which the articles he discovered are made can be found nowhere save in China."

Fortifying New York.

It is not generally known that the government at present is paying more attention to the fortifications in and about New York harbor than at any other point. This is due to the fact, according to the statement of an army officer high in the councils of the nation, that the possibility of trouble with Spain has, in the government's eye, developed into a probability. This being the case the necessity is greater than ever for knowing exactly what the fortifications of Sandy Hook, where Fort Hancock is located, amount to. It is absolutely necessary to know just how far away the gunners at the fort can strike blows that will tell upon the war vessels of an enemy.

Future Inter-Collegiate Boating.

Cornell has established the clearest title to an inter-collegiate rowing championship that has ever been established in American waters. We may leave entirely out of consideration her past failures and triumphs, says the New Haven Register, and force a useless discussion as to her future. Today she is the queen of the princess of the river, and her position is so firm that she is not likely to be dethroned for many years.

What a Woman Can do.

Bob Burdette says: "A woman cannot sharpen a pencil, and outside of commercial circles she cannot tie a package to make it look like anything save a crooked cross section of chicken, but, land of miracles! see what she can do with a pin! I believe there are some women who can pin a glass knob to a door. She can walk so many miles around a hill and table without tiring to eat and nothing to speak of to drink, but she cannot walk the floor all night with a fretful baby without going sound asleep the first half hour."

A SAVING IN CUSTOMS.

VAN DYKE—I see you are painting that figure for the American customer entirely without drapery.
D'AUBER—Ouf. I would avoid the new tariff on the wearing apparel.
